Location: American University Library
Job Title: Humanities and Social Sciences Librarian

Responsibilities: American University Library invites applications from innovative, energetic, and service-oriented librarians to fill a library continuing appointment faculty position to support the College of Arts and Sciences [CAS], beginning Spring 2024. Rank will be dependent upon experience and stature in the field at either assistant or associate level.

Responsibilities: The Humanities and Social Sciences Librarian will be the point person for research assistance, information literacy instruction, and collection development in support of the following departments within the College of Arts and Sciences [CAS]: Anthropology; Critical Race, Gender and Culture Studies; History; Jewish Studies; Literature; Philosophy and Religion; Sociology; World Languages and Culture.

Requirements: An ALA-accredited M.L.S and professional experience in an academic or research institution are highly preferred. Deep knowledge of current and emerging ideas, practices, trends, and technologies that support Humanities and Social Science librarianship. Ability to understand, anticipate, and respond to priorities and trends in the library, university, and academia regarding humanities and social science librarianship. Must be able to work independently and collaboratively. Other essential qualifications include demonstrated research assistance experience or training; evidence of potential for professional contributions and ongoing professional development; outstanding interpersonal and communication skills; strong public service ethic; and collaborative skills. To be successful in the position, candidates will possess the ability to shift priorities in a rapidly changing environment; to work across a broad-based constituency; to communicate a positive library image; and to have an awareness of current concerns and developments in librarianship.
